ATTN: Mr. Mike Newberry – Corecon Technologies, Inc.

SUBJECT: Corecon Training Seminar
Deland, FL

Mike:

This letter is a follow up to the recent Corecon training session that you gave Cathy and myself over the past weekend in Deland, Florida. Having been working in Corecon over the past year, I was familiar with the program and had a good idea as to the capabilities of the system and what Corecon had to offer. But I must say, I was very impressed with your knowledge of the program and it was very exciting to see Corecon being used to its fullest capability. Quite honestly, I have not been using the program properly. After the training session this past weekend, I feel that I have a much better understanding of the programs workflow, which I'm confident will help our company work more efficiently in Corecon. If there's one thing that I took away from the training session is that if you do not follow Corecon's workflow chart when building a project within the system, essentially you will be working against yourself. I also walked away realizing the importance of each employee within our company performing their work in Corecon properly, as not to create additional work for the next person. For example, if the estimating department does not properly build the estimate in Corecon, they could easily create additional work for the project management team.

As soon as Cathy and I got back in town, we conveyed to all of our employees using Corecon the importance of learning the program so that we can function more efficiently as an organization, which will benefit everyone.

One other thing that I would like to point out is that prior to starting Olympian Builders, Cathy and I worked for a couple of larger general contractors. One being Brice Building Company, Inc., which is one of the Gulf South's largest commercial general contractors, with annual revenues between $300,000,000 and $350,000,000. And usually ranking between No.200 and No.230 in ENR's Top 400 Contractors. Having worked at Brice Building Company for 12-years and using their "in-house", custom designed project management software program, it's my feeling that Corecon actually has more to offer than Brice's PM program. Especially considering the integration in Corecon with Job Costing, Project management, and Estimating.

Overall, we're very happy with our decision in selecting Corecon for our construction management software and feel that Corecon will allow us to operate more efficiently, which in turn will help us grow our business more effectively. And I certainly feel the Corecon training session with you in Florida gave us a much better understanding of how the program functions. It was well worth the time and costs.

It was a pleasure meeting you Mike and thank you for your time showing us the proper way to utilize Corecon.

Sincerely,
